Warrior Profiles

This document is designed to compliement the Rebellion Rules and the Forces of the Rebellion army lists for wargaming the First Scottish War of Independence by eBob Miniatures.

FotR (Forces of the Rebellion) presents the player with suitable army lists for gaming various scenarios appropriate to the period. The profiles presented here flesh out the heroes and the warriors listed in FotR and give the detail required to play the game using the Rebellion rules.

Each warrior type or hero has a list of characteristics and abilities which define the character and also lists various equipment, arms and armour options available. However, if the players are using armies generated from the FotR lists then the equipment options shown in FotR take precedence over the possible options shown here.

For example, the Lowlander profile shows equipment options including shield, short bow and pike, however FotR shows that if the warrior is being taken as a pikeman then he is not permitted to also carry a bow. Likewise Lowlander archers are not permitted to take a shield etc.

For many of the army lists in FotR it is not possible to comprehensively list all of the famous named heroes that may have taken part in certain campaigns such as the battle of Falkirk or Bannockburn, and so only 3 or 4 heroes may be listed in FotR. Each hero listed here in the profiles shows the army lists for which he may be taken.

If players have done their own research and have identified a named hero that took part in a particular campaign, they are encouraged to generate a random hero profile using the rules in the main rules document and include the hero in their army.

The profiles also indicate wether a warrior or hero is appropriate for either and Early or Late force, or both and the primary alliance is also shown. Some heroes such as Robert de Brus, Earl of Carrick may be taken by either the Scottish player or the English player as he fought on both sides at various times during the period. These heroes are less expensive than other heroes of similar strength because of the possibility of defection. If both players choose to include the same hero refer to the defections section of the main rules document.

Note that equipment items shown as costing 0pts are free and may be included even if not listed as an option under the Forces of Rebellion army list.
